National Workshop On "Creating an Exhaustive Reading List for Research"

Thursday, 27th April, 2023, 12 to 2 p.m.

Concept Note

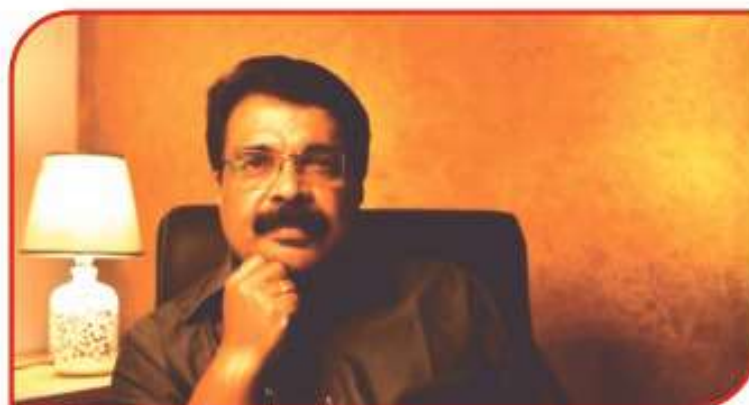

There has been a sea change in the way people search for information after the invasion of the Internet and the associated technologies. Earlier it was difficult for information to get distributed to the various parts of the globe because of the barriers of Distance, Time, and Language. It was a dream of information scientists to have control of the information flow. But the invasion of the Internet has changed the scenario as a whole and now the amount of information that gets produced and gets disseminated is tremendous and difficult to control. This phenomenon is called an Information Explosion. Hence every one is facing Information Overload.

Researchers are the people most affected as they have to depend on the reports of earlier research a lot. It is very difficult to identify the research reports relevant to one's topic of research because of the enormous amount of information in front of us. But technology is helping us to identify documents relevant to our topic of research using digital tools. Through this session, we will learn how to make an exhaustive list of journal articles on a topic of research.

Objectives

- Provide training in the search of databases for relevant journal articles.
- Provide training on making an exhaustive list of journal articles on a topic of research.
- Provide training in the Citation and creation of a Bibliography to avoid plagiarism.
